ISN'T IT TIME TO CHANGE PARTNERS?

Congress should repeal the Grout Bill that taxes Oleomargarine, colored any shade of yellow, 10 cents per pound. This is repressive taxation and favors one industry at the expense of another. The high price of butter puts it beyond the reach of thousands of families who could afford Oleomargarine with the 10 cents tax removed. Swift's Premium Oleomargarine is put up in identifiable cartons under Government inspection and guarantee.

HINTS to WOMEN READERS

SIMPLE CASHMERE FROCK.

The gown shown in the accompanying drawing has for its foundation a blouse and skirt which are extremely plain as to cut. The blouse is peasant style, a deep "V" cut from the front; a shorter one from the back displays a vest of the material, which is old blue cashmere and a square yoke of lace. The "V" is bound with self-tone satin ribbon ending in a two-looped bow at the waist line. The short lace-trimmed sleeves are also bound with the ribbon and trimmed with small butterfly bows. The skirt has a shaped trimming of lace simulating a tunic, the lower portion of the skirt buttoning with satin buttons, as does the little vest.

Latest American Fashions

Foulards are perennial. They bob up every spring as regularly and as serenely as flowers in country fields and, like the flowers, they are always welcome. They are always a favorite because they are so easy to wear and so easy to make. They are also a favorite because they are so easy to make. They are also a favorite because they are so easy to make.

This year's designs run to spots, dots and stripes—all kinds and conditions of them, but for the most part these are arranged symmetrically to form stripes or some other conventional pattern rather than being scattered hit or miss, and their colorings are very beautiful, many of them unusual.

Last year all the foulards were veiled with a plain transparency. This year the veiling is not altogether out of the reckoning, but the mode of the moment exploits, instead, clever developments of plain and figured foulards with borders to give them character.

The model sketched for today is entirely representative of the newest foulards and the method of their fashioning. Pale gray and the same gray with dark rose polka dots were used, the former in the skirt that is perfectly plain and in the kimono top of the blouse, while the dotted material, hung with considerable fullness, evenly distributed, from the belt, is gathered again just above the knees, pouching all around a trifle over a flounce that is formed of a border design in which the dots are darker and of graduated sizes.

The bordering appears again in the lower part of the blouse and in the turn-back, knife-plaited frills that finish the very short sleeves, while the neck is cut out in a little circle, finished with a soft mull collar, scalloped with rose color and caught in front with a bow of satin matching the deep rose of the dots.

Too much attention cannot be accorded to details this spring. They are the essential striking and "different" as materials are they count for next to nothing beside the little touches, and it is nowhere so evident as in the case of the foulards, which seem particularly to require the little niceties.

But then, as for that, the last year or two that foulards have been appreciated as other than the least formal of fabrics, but have remained practically on a plane with washable silks and fine ginghams. Veiling them necessarily raised them to a different sphere, and now, as they are being made up this spring, they are assured of a fixed position for after-noon wear, and, in every outfit, it will be found desirable to include at least one foulard costume.

A few new patterns are in evidence tomers to which it sends advertising circulars makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting she is able to buy almost everything she uses at from 20 to 30 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year.

One day in January she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought half a dozen.

In February she found an opportunity to buy 37 1/2-cent towels for 25 cents apiece. Had she waited until her sheets and towels actually wore out in the spring she would probably have had to pay staple prices.

She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 and $30 covers the first of these requirements, and as for the second, well, this woman says, "That is my trade. I think my husband's business is to earn as much money as possible, and mine to get as much value as possible out of it. By this method I make $250 out of the work of $800 or $750. Isn't that worth while to one who has to count the pennies?"

Of course, any woman would find it simpler, pleasanter and more dignified to go shopping just when she felt like it and pay staple prices.

But then, as for that, that might not any man find it simpler, pleasanter and more dignified to work when he felt like it and accept a low salary, instead of working hard for a higher one?

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

SARTORIAL HINTS.
By Elizabeth Lee.

Many of the new styles in frocks for spring and summer show a combination of two materials, so there is no reason why last year's dresses may not be made to blossom anew with very little trouble or expense.

Supposing the dress is faded or worn, seemingly all that is necessary is to cover the parts with a contrasting material, such patchwork-looking affairs as some of these made are. Still, there is a method pursued, I suppose, despite appearances.

This year's stripes are very smart. Last summer plain fabrics were favored. And so, putting the two together, the result will be an up-to-date gown.

As the waist of a gown wears out more quickly than the skirt, it may be only the latter is available for remodeling.

We will suppose the material of the skirt is plain. Then striped goods matching or harmonizing with the plain should be chosen.

The bottom of the skirt may be cut off at any point below the knee and new fabric made the length. If the front width is worn, the new could then run up to the waist line in panel effect.

The best portions of the material cut away from the skirt could be used for remodeling the waist and sleeves, a shallow yoke and cuffs of the new material being set on.

It might be argued one may just as well make a new dress, but this is a mistake, because the remodeling calls for no skilled work, such as cutting and fitting, the entire undertaking being quite within the power of the amateur seamstress. It is not the cost of the material that counts, as every woman knows, it is the making that runs away with the money. So if one has a gown that fits the hips perfectly and is well set up as regards waistline it will be quite one-quarter yard black satin for belt, or a smart belt ready to wear may be the finish.

Another good style is the tunic that is shorter at the front than the back. It leaves the left side nearly long and decreases in length as it goes around the skirt until it reaches the seam again.

The waist part of the tunic is in jumper effect, so supposing the gown is in style or a little worn around the bottom, one could make a new tunic and add a band of the new goods around the lower edge of the skirt. Two and one-half yards of new material will be required, with one-quarter yard black satin for belt, or a smart belt ready to wear may be the finish.

This dress, such as voile, marquisette or similar transparent fabrics may be made practical for day wear by combining a striped silk. If the wearer-to-

When a man or a woman grows fat and huge, fatty layers of this worthless flesh make them miserable. It is a certain sign that somewhere within the organism of that man or woman there is something radically wrong. The healthy man or woman digests all that is good in food and throws off in a natural manner all that is bad. This is what the digestive juices are made for. When these juices are weakened or too powerful they cannot get the good things out of the nourishment we eat, and hence they turn into the blood that makes fat. It is very simple to correct these juices in a fat person. This secret has been demonstrated in the famous Marmola Tablets which now have such a tremendous sale. They reduce fat at the rate of 12 to 15 ounces a day. They correct the faulty juices and give to the body the very nutrition it needs. They remove fat in a natural manner, but they do it so quickly as to be almost beyond belief. You do not have to diet or exercise or you may eat what you will. These little tablets are the result of a demand on the part of the public for a firm of the famous Marmola prescription that will permit a fat person to carry his fat redoubt with him at all times, so that each meal will add no more fat to his body. Marmola Tablets are sold by every druggist, or you may write the Marmola Company, 283 Farmer bldg., Detroit, Mich., and a case will be sent you privately by mail. The price of Marmola Tablets is 75 cents everywhere.
